

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

My Lady's Face.

My lady's face—its delicate, firm lines
Set in a sweep of dusky, loosened hair,
The dainty chiseled chin, sweet, subtle mouth—

When these have caught you she is passing fair,
When you have caught each motion's changeable grace, Deem not that you have learned my lady's face.

Nor ever shall, for in my lady's eyes Something to lure and baffle still shall dwell,
To stir the senses with its swift surprise,
And keep in revealing moments tell How wondrous pure and strong a spirit lives Shadow enshrined, deep in my lady's eyes.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white panne crepe de chine, trimmed with old Honiton lace. Her veil was held with orange blossoms, and she carried white sweet peas. One of the most valuable of many wedding gifts was an autograph poem written for the bride, by Mrs. Mary A. Denison, of Washington, author of "That Husband of Mine."
The poem was written on small note paper, folded and inclosed in a case of the finest satin and lace, contained in a white satin work bag, the whole making a very unique and appropriate, as well as a very beautiful, wedding gift. It was hoped the venerable poetess would be able to attend the marriage, and

CANDOR.

By HENRY CUYLER BUNNER.

Another selection from this writer's poems, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch have already been printed in this series.

KNOW what you are going to say," she said,
And she stood up looking uncommonly tall;
"You are going to speak of the hectic fall,
And say you're sorry the Summer's dead,
And no other Summer was like it, you know,
And can I imagine what made it so?
Now, aren't you, honestly?"—"Yes," I said.

"I know what you're going to say," she said;
"You are going to ask if I forget That day in June when the woods were wet,
And you carried me"—here she dropped her head—
"Over the creek; you are going to say,
Do I remember that horrid day?
Now, aren't you, honestly?"—"Yes," I said.

"I know what you're going to say," she said;
"You are going to say that since that time
You have rather tended to run to rhyme,
"And"—her clear glance fell and her cheek grew red—
"And have I noticed your tone was queer?"— Why, everybody has seen it here!
Now, aren't you, honestly?"—"Yes," I said.

"I know what you're going to say," she said;
"You going to say you've been much annoyed,
And I'm short of tact—you will say 'devoted'—
And I'm clumsy and awkward, and call me Ted,
And I bear abuse like a dear old lamb,
And you'll have me anyway, just as I am.
Now, aren't you, honestly?"—"Ye-es," she said.

This series began in The Times-Dispatch Sunday, October 11, 1903. One is published each day much disappointment was felt that she was unable to do so.

Mrs. Banks belongs to the Ball, Lewis and Walton families of Virginia, and is

F. Garvey, of Baltimore.

RELATIVE OF RUSSELL
SAGE DIES IN POVERTY

Lost Money in Speculation and Too Proud to Appeal to Family.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NEW YORK, June 8.—William M. Riley, a blood relative of Russell Sage, died in the New York Hospital early yesterday morning, a few hours after he had been taken to that institution as a charity patient. He had been a member of the New York Stock Exchange, a mining speculator, a real estate operator and was interested in the exploitation of the lumber interests when Wisconsin was opened up.
Mrs. Jeannette Huntington Riley, his widow, related to all the Huntington's, wrested in her net little room, at No.
204 West Nineteenth Street, last night as she told of her husband's successes and failures. Forty years ago Mrs. Riley said, her husband had been worth $200,000, but the fluctuations of railway securities had ruined him. Wall Street had been Syracuse seventy-eight years ago, the son of Calvin Riley, he was educated at Shurtleff College, and then embarked in a mercantile career with his father. He then began to speculate, and for a time was successful. When the crash came he went West.

One of the best operations in the mining field, said Mrs. Riley, was the sale of the Pelican and Dives mines in Georgetown, Col., for $500,000. With his commissions on this sale he again embarked in speculation only to lose all again.

"But I had been taught needlework," said Mrs. Riley, "and when my husband could not work I worked for both." She said that they were too proud to appeal to their wealthy relatives.

FASHION HINTS

LADIES' TUCKED WAIST.

With Chamsette, Bloused or Drawn Down and With or Without Lining.
No. 3166—The chemise is the distinguishing mark of this season's up-to-date waist. Made of allover lace or embrodery as in the picture or of plain tulle, it adds a dainty dainty dainty touch that is very fetching and that takes away the severe effect from the plainest of plain waists.

The charming waist here shown was made of champagne cotton voile upon which is scattered a design of tiny colored figures in woven silk circles.
Three tucks at each side of back extend from shoulder to waist in symmetrical effect. The front is cut in a plastron plait and closes invisibly under the overlapping plait at the side. The sleeve is of the fashionable leg-o-mutton type and may be finished with a band of embrodery or left perfectly plain at the waist. The pattern includes a lining which may be omitted or not, as desired.

The style is very handsome for developing in either linen, madras, taffeta, foulard, pongee, mohair, voile, etamine, lawn, dimity or batiste.

The pattern is cut in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches, bust measure and requires 2½ yards of 38-inch material, half yard of contrasting material and 1½ yards of lining to make in the medium size.

This pattern can be gotten at The Cohen Company for 10c.—Adv.
